

Call for Papers

Glasgow-SIRE Workshop in Microeconomic Theory

Adam Smith Business School, University of Glasgow

November 29-30, 2013

This is a Call for Papers for the Glasgow-SIRE Workshop in Microeconomic Theory to be held November 29-30, 2013.

Faruk Gul (Princeton) and Tomas Mariotti (Toulouse) have agreed to be keynote speakers.

The workshop aims to:

- Provide a forum for microeconomic theorists working in Scottish Universities for interaction with each other and with distinguished keynote speakers;
- Provide an opportunity for PhD students in Scottish universities to interact with distinguished keynote speakers and faculty working in microeconomic theory.

Submissions in all areas of microeconomic theory are welcome; preference will be given to completed papers. Submissions should be e-mailed to Sayantan.Ghosal@glasgow.ac.uk by the 30th of September (the submission deadline).

Decisions will be communicated by the 7th of October.

The plan is to have 35 minutes for the presentation for accepted papers and followed by a 10 minute presentation by a discussant. Participants (either faculty or PhD students) who do not necessarily want to present papers are also welcome. Please note that conference participants may be called upon to act as discussants for accepted papers.

We look forward to your submissions and participation in the workshop.

Organisers: Sayantan Ghosal, Takashi Hayashi, Alexander Kovalenkov and Yiannis Vailakis (all at the Adam Smith Business School, University of Glasgow).

Please contact Sayantan Ghosal Sayantan.Ghosal@glasgow.ac.uk if you have any questions.
