SIRE and the University of Edinburgh School of Economics are delighted to host the fourth Field Days workshop on the 11th and 12th of September 2015. This is a two-day international workshop on field experiments in the area of labour, health and development. The series was begun by the German Institute for Economic Research, Berlin in 2011 and gathers high profile researchers involved in field experimental research across the world.

The workshop aims to increase the exposure to field experimental research, exchange knowledge between Scottish and international researchers and engage with the wider public and policy makers.

Participation is free but booking is essential. Please register via the Eventbrite facility.
